

Teens' Orphan Response Brings Ann An Owl

Owls, orphans and Ann Landers seem like an unlikely combination, but they all proved Thursday that the American teen-ager deserves more credit than he gets.

Since last November when a letter appeared in Ann Landers' column, more than 1,000 teen-agers have contributed some $120,000 in supporting abandoned Korean children.

As a token of thanks for her help, The Sun-Times columnist was presented with an owl Thursday hand-carved by one of the now cared-for orphans.

The letter was from a young reader who wanted to know if he was old enough to financially "adopt" an orphan by sending $10 a month to a sponsoring agency he had heard about.

Miss Landers informed the reader that there was no age limit on the adoption plan and told him about Compassion, one such agency at 7774 W. Irving Park, which supports 140 orphanages in Korea.

The response from other teen-agers was overwhelming, according to the Rev. Henry Harvey, president of Compassion, who gave Miss Landers the owl.

"This proves that all American teen-agers aren't hippies or high school drop-outs, which I've known for a long time," said Miss Landers. "They deserve more credit

than they get."

Compassion supports more than 22,000 orphans in Korea, said the Rev. Mr. Harvey, but about 7,000 children are still unsponsored.

"With the continued help from American teen-agers, these children can find homes, 100," Miss Landers said.

HENRY HARVEY

Sun-Times columnist Ann Landers chats with Mrs. Miriam Swanson (left), vice president of Compassion. The hand-carved owl was presented to Miss Landers for helping Korean orphans. (Sun-Times Photo)

CHICAGO SUN-TIMES, Fri., Aug. 11, 1967

Teens' Orphan Response Brings Ann An Owl

Owls, orphans and Ann Landers seem like an unlikely combination, but they all proved Thursday that the American teen-ager deserves more credit than he gets.

Since last November when

a letter appeared in Ann Landers' column, more than 1,000 teen-agers have contributed some $120,000 in supporting abandoned Korean children.

As a token of thanks for her help, The Sun-Times columnist was presented with an owl Thursday hand-carved by one of the now cared-for orphans.

The letter was from a young reader who wanted to know if he was old enough to financially "adopt" an orphan by sending $10 a month to a sponsoring agency he had heard about.

Miss Landers informed the reader that there was no age limit on the adoption plan and told him about Compassion, one such agency at 7774 W. Irving Park, which supports 140 orphanages in Korea.

The response from other teen-agers was overwhelming, according to the Rev. Henry Harvey, president of Compassion, who gave Miss Landers the owl.

"This proves that all American teen-agers aren't hippies or high school drop-outs, which I've known for a long time," said Miss Landers. "They deserve more credit

than they get."

Compassion supports more than 22,000 orphans in Korea, said the Rev. Mr. Harvey, but about 7,000 children are still unsponsored.

"With the continued help from American teen-agers, these children can find homes, too," Miss Landers said.

HENRY HARVEY

Sun-Times columnist Ann Landers chats with Mrs. Miriam Swanson (left), vice president of Compassion. The hand-carved owl was presented to Miss Landers for helping Korean orphans. (Sun-Times Photo)

STOPS ITCH OF INSECT BITES
"de-itches" skin, antiseptic helps prevent infection.
Zemo
OINTMENT OR LIQUID